"Oh!" I replied, "I shall easily find them myself." the aqueducts of Seranus, the Roman camp of Holderloch, or the vestiges of Theodoric, according to their fancy. The only remarkable feature about these ruins was the flight of stairs of a cavern cut in "That is unnecessary," he said, "Hans will show you the way; he has nothing better to do." And my cousin, having tapped upon his glass, called his servant and said: the rock. Contrary to most winding stairs, instead of the concentric circles contracting at every downward sweep, the spiral of this hollow increased in width in such a manner that the bottom of the hollow be-

Could this be a caprice of architecture?

Or what other cause determined so odd a structure? It is a matter which need concern us little; sufficient for the present is the fact that in the cavern might be heard that vague murmur which anyone may to the brow of the hill. Hans Gerthalmers, M. D. that vague murmur which anyone may hear by applying the hollow of a shell to his ear; you could hear also the step of the wayfarer upon the gravel, the sighing of the breeze, the rustling of the leaves, and ner pointed out to me with his hand the remains of the aqueduct. At this moment the rocky edge of the plateau, the blue meuntains of Hundsruck, the sadly dilapidated walls covered with sombre ivy, the clang of the village bell calling the worthies of Hirchwiller to council, the panting Constable clinging to the brushwood, all produced within me a sad and sombre impression I could hardly account for, unless it might be the history of the poor suicide casting a shadow on the horieven the conversation of the passersby.

The three travelers ascended the little footpath which lay between the vines and the cabbage-gardens of Hirchwiller. "I can see nothing," broke forth the tating the tone of his superior.
"Oh, it is in the hole," muttered the shepherd. "We shall see, "the Burgo-

I inquired of attention of our worthy rustics; they thought only of laying hands upon the "No, sir, the peasants are afraid; they imagine that the ghost has gone back again. No one ventures into the Screech-owl's halted and listened. Then they looked into the darkness—nothing could be seen,

"Confound it," exclaimed the Burgo-master, "we have forgotten to bring a bit of candle with us. Get down the stair, "It resembles that closely," said I, lift-ing my eyes. "This vault reversed forms the concha or outer part, underneath the Kasper; you know the way better than I do. I will follow you."

At this proposal the shepherd recoiled hastily. If he had followed his own inclistairs we have the tympanic cavity, and the windings of the staircase represent the the windings of the staircase represent the cochles, the labyrinth, and the vestibule of the ear. Here, then, is the cause of the murmur which is heard: we are at the base nation the poor fellow would have taken to his heels; his piteous looks caused the Burgomaster to fall into fits of laughter. "It is very likely," replied Hans, who seemed to understand nothing of my ob-

"Very well then, Hans, since Kasper is afraid to descend, you must lead the way."
"But—but, good Burgomaster," expostulated the Constable, "you know there are some of the steps awanting. We run the risk of breaking our necks."
"Then send in your dog, Kasper," continued the Burgomaster. we prepared to ascend, and I had already mounted a few steps when I felt something crumble under my foot. Bending down to see what it might be, I perceived at the same time a white object before me, which proved to be a tattered sheet of paper. As for the hard substance which had been broken, I recognized in it a kind of glazed brown stone ing. tinued the Burgomaster.

The shepherd called his dog; he showed him the stairs, he urged him forward, but

"Oh, ho!" I cried, "this may throw some light upon the Burgomaster's story," and I rejoined Hans Gorner, who already and I rejoined Hans Gorner, who already awaited me at the mouth of the cavern.
"Now sir," he said to me, "where do you wish to go?" And without hesitating the bold man approached the staircase holding his gun. But by reason of the acoustic effects which have been already pointing the ghoat, the vagabond, or you wish to go?"

"In the first place," said I, "let us rest a little; we shall consider presently."
I sat down upon a stone, while Hans cast his falcon eye round about the village in search of plunderers in the gardens, if any such could be discovered.
I examined carefully the stone vase, of which only a fragment remained. That heard all that had passed. The idea of receiving the report of a gun did not seem to suit his tastes, for in a small, shrill voice he cried:

"Hold! do not fire! I ascend to you."

This authoritative speech was not at all in keeping with the dress and figure of the little fellow, so the Burgomaster replied indignantly:

"Make haste to prove yourself an honest man, you wretched imp, or I shall begin by giving you a thrashing."

"A thrashing!" cried the manikin, dancing with rage and drawing himself up under the nose of the Burgomaster.

"Yes, a thrashing," replied Petrousse, who, nevertheless, could not help admiring the courage of the dwarf, "if you do not reply in a satisfactory manner to the questions I am about to put to you. I am the Burgomaster of Hirchwiller; here is the Constable, the shepherd and his dog; we are stronger than you, observe; be wise, therefore, and tell me peaceably what you are, what you do here, and why you do not appear in the light of day. After that we shall see what is to be done with you."

"All that does not concern you," replied the little man in his harsh voice; "I will not answer you."

"In that case, then, forward, march!"

the little man in his harsh voice; "I will not answer you."

"In that case, then, forward, march!" the Bargemaster responded, seizing him by the neck, "you shall take up your quarters in prison."

The little fellow struggled and twisted like a weasel: he even attempted to bite, and the dog was already manifesting designs upon his calves, when, thoroughly exhausted, he said, not without a certain dignity:

"Release me sir, I yield to force; I shall follow you."

The Burgemaster, not wanting in courtesy, became more calm in turn.

And this is how, on the night of the 29th of July, 1835, the Burgomaster of Hirching. The Burgomaster was a tall thin man, and wore on his lip a large grizzly mustache. He had, in former days, served in the army of the Archduke Charles; and, while possessed of a good-natured disposition, he ruled the village of Hirchiviller with a wag of his finger and a nod of his head.

But about three weeks after these events I went to see my cousin Petreusse, of whom I happened to be the nearest relative and heir, circumstances which maintained between us an attachment of the closst kind. We were dining together and talking of various subjects, in the course of which he related to me the preceding history, just as I have reported it.

"It is strange, cousin," said I to him, "very strange! and you have no other trace of that mysterious being?"

INTERESTING FACTS .- The tomb of Edward I., who died in 1301, was opened January 2, 1770, after 463 years had elapsed. His body was almost perfect. Canute the Dane, who crossed over to Englike implements, were dug out of peat in Ireland, where they had probably lain 1,500 years. Their bodies were perfectly fresh and plump. Then the three besiegers regarded each other, subduing their laughter, and the Burgomaster again bending over the hollow shouted in rude tone:
"Make haste, rascal, or I fire!"
He shouldered his gun. The click of the lock seemed to hasten the ascent of the mysterious individual, and several stones, detached in his haste, were heard to roll to the bottom. Nevertheless, more than a minute elapsed before any one appeared, the cavern being at least sixty feet in depth.

What could engage that man in the midst of such darkness? Surely he must be some great criminal. Thus thought at least the Burgomaster and his attendants. At length a vague form emerged from the shade. Then, slowly, step by step, a little lean red-haired man, four and a half feet in hight, his complexion sallow, his eye sparkling like a magpie's, his hair in disorder, and his clothes in tatters, issued from the cavern crying—which is coming from the mines now in operation, but with the accumulations of thirty years.

Upon this most important consideration
Colonel Mendell's report may be studied with advantage. Speaking of remedial works, he says: "If this system of re"strainthad proceeded pari passu with minfailure of all Reed's attempts to obtain a stand by the action of the General Assembly, as opposed to the record of free whisky and on Sunday. Under the battle's inspiration, with the stimulus of excitement, and the courage comradeship gives, soldiers charge upon the death-dealing battery of an enemy, and the world is filled with laudations of their courage. Bennett and Callahan went down into the darkness and slines and foul heated vapors of an abyss in the Alta mine, with their lives in their hands, to give alto imprisoned miners. They died in the atteupt. Which were the greater heroes, the soldiers or the poor miners? Mrs. James wept copiously the whole time, but the absurdity of the proceedings stifl d any feeling which might have been experienced for her or her children. The horrible pronunciation and grammar of the lecturer created a general smile, and his allusion to young Jessia as a "stripling' caused a laugh. Before the peroration, which was very flighty and disjointed, was completed, the audience was leaving the hall. The party will start on their eastward tour to-morrow.

LOGAL INTELLIGENCE.

RATEN'S STATEMENT. - When Simon Raten, the murderer of Lansing, made his statement in Court, a member of the jury which found Raten guilty of murder in the first degree, said to a well-known attorney that if the statement just concluded had been made in the presence of the jury hefore which he was tried, the verdict rendered would not have been found. It is admitted by all concerned that Raten did apply for a warrant for the arrest of parties whom he asserted had assaulted and beaten him. It is admitted that he bore upon his person the indultable evidences of a breach of the peace having been committed. It is well known that he was repulsed by the officers to whom the application was made. The applogy for the refusal is that Raten appeared to be drunk and irresponsible. Every known circumstance surrounding the case establishes the clearest probability that if the officers had looked into the case—if the authorities had interfered between Raten and Erickson—the subsequent collision between them would not have occurred, but, on the contrary, it could and most likely would have been prevented. His bruised face alone was sufficient to justify in red, but, on the contrary, it could and most likely would have been prevented. to the law was denied because he was an irresponsible vagabond; his story is now sought to be put down because he is a convicted murderer. It is the opinion of the best lawyers at the bar of this city that Raten's crime was manslaughter, and not murder in the first degree. He is friendless, moneyless, obscure and under sentence of death, but those disadvantages shall not prevent a just consideration of his statements.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.—Board met yesterday, pursuant to adjournment. Present—Dreman, Blair, Butler, Bailey and Christy—Supervisor Christy Chairman pro tem. On motion, the sum of $6 was allowed to Jane Clemmens for relief; also $10 to Mrs. Roses Brenhardt. The report of Sheriff Heilbron of the amount expended for feeding the condity Sheriff Heilbron of the month of May was received, read and ordered on file. Supervisor Blair moved that the Clerk of the Board be instructed to notify Sheriff Heilbron that he must itemize his claim against the county for feeding the county prisoners, in accordance with Section 4072 of the Political Code. The notion was laid over until to-day by consent, there not being a full Board present. Jess Slaughter

C. H. RANLETT DEAD.—Charles H. Ranlett, one of the pioneers of California, and well-known as a cattle dealer in this section, died on the 5th instant at Eureka Springs, in Arkansas. For the past two years he has been afflicted with a cancer in his face. He doctored for it in this city and San Francisco, and the physicians all assured him that his case was hopeless. Some one recommended him to go to the Eureka Springs in Arkansas, and he did so some two weeks ago. Mr. Raulett was a pioneer of Placer county, and lived on what was known as the Forest Hill divide for many years. He leaves a wife and large family of children to mourn his loss. His family resides at Twenty-seventh and H streets. He was an honest, upright and honorable man, and one of Sacramento's best citizens.

fore the law. No one is exempt under a civilized mo of government. Believing these to be axitatic truths, we call the attention of the State and thoual Governments, and the far-seeing eye of the tesman, and the patriotic press, to the calamitous uation of a large and important portion of our mmonwealth. This evil has been superinduced hydraulic mining. What was for many years mparatively a harmless process has been so enged and improved as to be an engine of destruction more powerful than earthquakes, and more adly than the flow of lava from Vesuvius. The ters of our mountains have been concentrated Democratic Delegates.

ation without sarrant of law or precedent. However much we may regret the effect upon a large industry, the right to continue cannot be conceded. We most respectfully but earnestly entreat all who are the future welfare of our State and the homes of her people to put the seal of condemnation upon a process so illegal, unnatural and destructive in its nature.

We are unafterably convinced that no remedial measures, either by this State or the General Government, can avail against the gigantic forces now employed in casting the mountains into the rivers. Let the hands of the destroyer first be stayed, and then it will require all the means available to avert the calamity impending. To advocate restraining works with the process continuing is to invite destinction sure and simple. We must regard him as infinited to the State's best interests and an enemy of law and order, who expects us to put our faith in restraining works or await the result of doubtful experiments.

In conclusion, we appeal to the arbiter of all great digestions, Public Opinion, which in the end must adjust this question upon the basis of law and just to all title, and in harmony with the principles of civilization. No one who values the stability of his own rights can remain passive when the rights of his dights this question appointed by the Convention of the State of Chihuahua.

THE OLD FOLKS' CONCERT.-The Old Folks' Concert, in aid of the Y. M. C. A. Reading Room Fund, was given at the Congregational church last evening to a good audience. There were on the stage some 25 singers, arrayed in the old time costumes, some of whom were very well gotten up : especially noticeable were those of a couple who represented "John Anderson" and wife, and the person who represented Brother Jonathan, and another who personated the traditional Yankee. Besides these were five members of an orchestra who appeared in the second part, a reader, three singers, and an instrumentalist, not in old-time costumes. J. F. THE GRAND GROVE OF DRUIDS. - The Druids' Grand Grove is in session in San Francisco. From the report of the Noble Grand Arch, E. Maginnis, it appears that turing the past year, although the Order ias not increased in membership, still its nancial condition is prosperous. Two isefulness extended into Arizena, from which locality there is every prospect of flattering news being received before another session of the Grand Grove. The report of the Grand Secretary shows that the al membership of the twenty-nine oves in the jurisdiction is 1,453. The net loss in membership was thirteen, but this cannot be counted as an actual loss, as there was an addition of twelve by the Grove instituted in Arizona, which could not appear in this year's report. The total amount disbursed in relief during the past year was $10,915 20. The Grand Grand commenced the year with $692 35 cash on hand, and closes it with $984 52 in the treasury. Washington Territory has been placed under the jurisdiction of the Grand placed under the jurisdiction of the Grand Grove of California, and a dispensation has been placed in the hands of C. G. Lorenz for the establishment at New Tacoma of a Grove. The Committee on Legislation presented a report with regard to the sessions of the Grand Grove being held biennally, as recommended in the report of the N. G. A., reporting adversely to the same, believing it would not be for the benefit of the Order to-make the suggested change.

The report was adopted. A Telling Law. Mr. Charles Law, Jr., in conversatio Mr. Charles Law, Jr., in conversation with one of our representatives, recently said: "I have been a sufferer from rheumatism and neuralgia for the past ten years, and tried all kinds of remedies. Having heard so much about St. Jacots Oil, I tried a bottle, and found it truly wonderful."—Pottstown (Pa.) Ledger.

> The Immigration Association has held its semi-annual meeting. The President's report states that the contributing members number 124 firms, with an aggregate monthly income of $685 67. The total sum received is $3,502 18, and disburse-ments $3,299 94. The unsettled condition of affairs in regard to the Chinese question influenced the subscription list. So far the income has been sufficient to carry on the work without incurring debt. have not been commensurate with the service rendered. Ten thousand copies of pamphlets in English, and five thousand in German, were distributed, the preparation and translation both being done in the office. The Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Company also printed from the stereotyped plates 25,000 copies without cost to the Association. The plats of Government lands in Mendocino, two volumes; San Luis Obispo, two volumes; Lake and Sonoma, each one volume, are completed; Shasta county, two volumes; Santa Cruz, eleven volumes, are nearly finished. In these counties the records show about 365,000 acres of surveyed Government land open to entry and settlement. Al-ready about 250,000 acres have been persesses sufficient information to locate probably 1,000 families, giving to each 160 acres. Late reports from the land officer in the field are most encouraging. Organ-izations working in connection with the Late reports from the land officer Association, but depending on local contri-butions, have been formed in Shasta and Lassen counties, and San Luis Obispo and San Diego, and are moving in the same direction. Information through letters and newspapers has been received from 38 out of the 52 counties. Applications for homes have been numerous, 478 personally, and 429 by letter. Owing to the lack of organized effort, California has not received her quota of infinigrants, but this can be re-medied, especially as immigrant rates from Europe will probably be reduced. But something must be done in the meantime. The continued heavy influx of immigrants leaves no doubt that the arrivals from Eu-

There are many at the age of thirty to sixty who are troubled with too frequent evacuation of the biadder, often accompanied by a slight surveting of burning sensation, and a weakening of the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examining the urinary deposites a ropy sediment will often be found, and sometimes small particles of albumen will appear, or the color will be of a thin milkigh
